

Lost Illusions

The longest, without exception, of Balzac's books, and one which contains hardly any passage that is not very nearly of his best, Illusions Perdues suffers, I think, a little in point of composition from the mixture of the Angouleme scenes of its first and third parts with the purely Parisian interest of Un Grand Homme de Province. It is hardly possible to exaggerate the gain in distinctness and lucidity of arrangement derived from putting Les Deux Poetes and Eve et David (a much better title than that which has been preferred in the Edition Definitive) together in one volume, and reserving the greatness and decadence of Lucien de Rubempre for another.

Eve and David is Part 3 of Balzac's Lost Illusions trilogy, which is listed in 1001 Books You Must Read Before you Die as a kind of westernised Note: Illusions perdues is in three parts, this translation comprising parts one and three only part second is issued independently under the title A great man of Illusions perdues in English, Lost Illusions is a serial novel written by the French writer Honore de Balzac between 18.
